

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and method for determining toner concentration of a sample comprised of toner and carrier, including exposing the sample to light; the exposing includes emitting light at a predefined wavelength based upon the color of the toner; detecting the light reflected off the sample with an optical sensor; and determining the toner concentration of the sample base upon the light reflected off the sample.